

TALKING EARBUDS

Jorja Hudson

INT. OFFICE

Lights up on one person sitting on a chair. He's listening to music in his earbuds. An office buddy walks over.

GERRY

(to himself)

Hey... Bob looks like he's really rocking out over there! I wonder what he's listening to. Hey, Bob! What's the cool jam?

Bob smiles and offers the earbuds to Gerry.

The earbuds speak to him and he follows their instructions.

EARBUDS

You will now begin to nod your head rhythmically at a 3/4 time signature. Just keep on doing that. Alright, great, now look over at your friend and give him the world's most boyish grin. Fantastic. Close your eyes and really sway that hair. Yes, as if you're a tiny little dog in a car window. Now stomp your feet like an angry child on a sticky summer day. Jump back in your seat as if you've just seen your father naked. Yes, that's right. Now stare intensely ahead as if you're trying to seduce Sarah Croin from accounting. Go ahead and wave your arms as if you're drowning in butter, and that is your biggest fetish in life. It feels good. At this point, you might want to raise your arms in the air and on the count of 3, say: I like-a party, yeah. Great, now try again, on the count of 3: I like-a party, yeah. You have successfully enjoyed the rock out. Now take us out.

He takes the earbuds out, looks at Bob and they grin at each other, feeling reeeeeal cool.

BLACKOUT.